question is whether the parties indicted of publishing what is in that circular; they are guilty of libel. No more fiend-like soliciting publication could be made; it bears a face a diabolical aspect, and unless men of high sensibility, and dead to all honor, can submit to this outrage. Some traced, or painted, or etched, or surmounted by a wreath, or a crown, or a star, or a star in some other wise manner, what would be the effect? It would feel like a stab in the sensibility; feel it due to yourself and to let out the blood of him who died in it? If it were a picture, it would be a picture of an impulse would be to strike the dagger into the breast of one who would thus degrade you, thus deprive you of your own life, and as just regard for their families as any—truly the picture but the Billingsgate as this is vile and scurrilous as that which discredits the market by that name in London. In this abuse:

On general matters, we will call attention of our readers to the conduct of individuals, who have disposed of themselves in the following manner:

THAITORS—The first rank for a man of portage—men who have become so debased by the habits of the highway, that they have adopted the vile manliness of character—through which they have obtained the name of highwaymen, and, and its every commendable trace commended.

THE VOLUNTARY OBSESSION LOOKS UPON THEM AS A DISGRACE TO THE NAME OF A MAN OF OFFICE, they desert their principles and their duty, and follow—down, and turned to the common cause.

Special has sold himself to a master, and he is a slave. He is a slave as a Kentucky car. Is language like this rated? Would it be lawful for a man to use this? I appeal to you to know how much it is used in the world, who of all men the most exalted, the noblest, these words? Wouldn't you feel the presence of that child if you did not know that slave? Wouldn't you feel redress. Such language is indictable, is a breach of the public peace, as the law declares.

Instructions cut off all the opposite consequences you believe about the benevolence of slavery. The price of labor has nothing to do with the case, the possibility of abolishing work has nothing to do with it. If the labor is no libel, and the law doesn't allow exumates; they lead to a breach of the law and you must, therefore, find defendants.

explained the object of the meeting purpose of appointing a committee to confer with the tobacco planters rational council, to equivoque into the dis-tion between the purchasers of leaf tobacco, the inspectors.

It was resolved that said committee consist of five persons from the purchasers, two from the tobacco, and three persons from the inspectors; whereupon Wm. Musselman, Joseph Brown, Graham, and J. H. Harper, and J. W. were appointed on the part of the leaf tobacco, and Chas. H. Harper, John, and Joseph Stockton, were appointed on the part of the inspectors. It was also resolved that said committee should have to settle all difficulties, and any agreement with them shall be binding.

Another resolution was that the proceedings be in the city papers.

On the meeting adjourned.

HEARD IN ST. LOUIS.—The St. Louis Globe of Friday, has the following mention of Miss, who was recently indicted for this city:

One of our police were at the late fair here, they made the acquaintance of one who represented himself an agent Co. of this city, in the sale of silver jewelry offered by Lummell to pass to the street, and on talking with him relations to Mead & Co., conceived the rather foolish notion that he was an impostor. Mr. Mann was taken in a member of the firm, the name of whom he freely used by him, was called, that the price of the jewelry had any deal— Mead & Co. and that, furthermore, he received numerous letters from Louisville inquiring about Mann. It was, although best to keep him in prison, in all more can be learned relative to his
